POETRY.

[Written for the Advertiser.]

Baby Willie.

BY MRS. GRETHER WHITMAN.
Baby Willie, thou hast left us
Life as sad and lone.
Gone thy dimpled feet have wandered,
To the great white throne.

Crossed the dusky flowing river,
Entered into rest;
Safe thy gentle Shepherd holds thee,
On His loving breast.

Then we gazed thee, fading Willie,
Our last, sad, goodby.
Watched thy gentle soul, soaring
Far beyond the sky;

Dark the shadows closed around us,
E'en our faith grew cold.
Were there not, without our dearest,
Lamb enough within the fold?

But the same voice called thee, Willie,
That thy gentle soul, soaring
Far beyond the sky;

Said, in blessing little children,
"Suffer them to come to me."
How we waited, darling Willie!
Miss thy smiling face.

Miss the radiant presence,
Full of wisdom's grace.
Miss the patter of thy footsteps,
Miss the radiance of the sunshine,
Gleaming in thy hair.

Miss the murmur of thy prattle,
Miss the sound of thy sweet voice,
Gone to the angel choir;
Yet we see thee, baby Willie,
With the eyes of faith.

See thee waiting, darling Willie!
By the peevy gates.
See thee waiting, darling Willie!
Ever, like lamps aglow.

See thee waiting, darling Willie!
Ever, like lamps aglow.

Talk of adventures. I could write a book full of what happened to me on that trip, but it would sound like a romance, and nobody would believe it.
Ah! friends, truth is stranger than fiction,
and I can prove it.

When I got my things settled in the car I felt kind of homesick and lonesome. There was the old cat left among strangers at one end of the journey, and Tom in distress at the other end, and I kind of swinging between the two, and I thought of the beautiful hymn that says—

This world is all a floating shoe.
And now, don't laugh—I just laid my head down on the back of the seat before me, and cried. I wouldn't have let Tom know it for the world, but I did!

There was a man in that seat, but he did not take any notice of me. His face was covered with whiskers, and he looked kind of stern, but a real good looking sort of a chap, too. I thought it was him that touched me, and I jumped as if I was shot, but it was the prettiest little blonde girl of sixteen I ever saw.

"Will you please let me sit with you?"
she said, and her voice was just like a bird singing, and she laid a little white hand, all caressing and dimpled, on my black bombazine arm.

I'm a grumpy myself, and I felt like saying as I heard the rest do, "This seat's engaged," but when she looked at me with her sweet violet eyes I just
gave in and said:

"Certainly, my dear; sit right down."
I suppose the sweet child saw I was crying, for she kind of snuggled up to me and wanted to see my bird, and she told me her secret story, how she had come all the way from California, and was an orphan going to seek a living in the great untamed world.

I came near crying again then, but I remembered where I was and straightened up.

"Did you ever know Mr. Grimwood
in California?" I asked. "This seat's engaged," but when she looked at me with her sweet violet eyes I just
gave in and said:

"Certainly, my dear; sit right down."
